

KAUHANE IS DEAD.

Kauhane, the whistling boss of Honolulu, whose eccentric apparel and odd custom of shouting "Wela ka Hao" upon the street corners to the delight of small urchins, is no more. He passed away at Lunalilo Home and is now beneath the sod. His funeral was largely attended by natives who were anxious to render the last sad offices to the old character of Honolulu's streets.

The old "Admiral," for he had numerous dignified titles, has been prominent upon gala days, or any affair that drew the crowd. If a Fourth of July procession was in motion, the "Admiral," clothed in the cast off uniform of a British officer of Marines, crowned by a military helmet, white parade gloves upon his horny hands, and flourishing a light stick with authoritative gestures, was one of the special features.

Upon the water-front when a transport was coming into the dock, Kauhane was sure to be present and his antics and commands to the ship's officers were such as to cause merriment galore, and put a dull, waiting crowd into the best of humor. Once during his inspection of the troops upon a transport, the Admiral had the misfortune to tumble off the wharf into the harbor. The old man however was equal to the occasion and swam strongly to the dock where he was pulled ashore nothing daunted.

During the quarantine a few months since, Kauhane became ill and was sent to the Victoria hospital for treatment, and from there was sent to Lunalilo Home for indigent Hawaiians. His death was not unexpected, but will be regretted by many people who were amused at the old man's harmless antics upon the streets.

If you are tired of the bother of ordinary lamps, if you wish to rid your self of their care, the above will appeal to you very strongly. When coupled with economy, the appeal is irresistible.

The Angle Lamp accomplishes perfect illumination. It presents an opportunity of securing light which is easily operated, and more brilliant than gas or electricity, with no more heat, at a mere fraction of their cost. It provides a lamp for homes, stores, offices, factories, halls, libraries, hotels and churches that is ideal in every way.

The public is cordially invited to call and inspect these lamps.
